In "Captain Stanley's sailing directions (yet to be published) it is stated that a current of the force of three knots sets into Basa's Straits, which in October, November, and December is to the castward, but in January, February, and March they may be looked for from the eastward, although, as they do not appear to be at any time continuous, they cannot be allowed for as a matter of course. These currents, in fact, depend a good deal on the state and direction of the wind. The treacherous character of this current is one of the strongestreacons in favour of a warning light. The present lighthouse is not visible far down the west side of the island, but the lighthouse-keeper has stated that, from the number of vessels he constantly sere creeping round from the southward, it is really surprising that there are not more of them lost on the western coast for want of a light. Our former Harbour-master, who was a man of large experience as a seaman, and withal a man of sound judgment, was opposed to the placing of the present light on Cape Wickham, on account of the danger of being drifted ashore down she west coast through the southerly set. In his evidence before the Commission which sat in 1866, he said that all the wrecks which had occurred up to that time had been from men being out in their reckoning, and that a light on the west coast would have saved them. Captain Williamson spoke of a "set of 40 miles is twenty-four hours, going right away to the southward and westward it was impossible to depend on being within ten miles of his reckoning, for which reason a light would be of the greatest advantage. THE MAN-EATING TREE OF MADAGASCAR.

THE MAN-EATING TREE OF MADAGASCAR.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Six.—Since the description of the "Man eating" tree of Madegascar appeared in the Herald, I have had so many inquiries made concerning this vagetable worder, that as a general abases I am induced to beg that you will give inserting the think of the matter. The steep as told is such as one might expect to find in an American paper; in a word it is, without doubt, a monatrons fiction from beginning to end. To suppose it to be otherwise would, I think, be an insult to common sense. It could just sail such a writer as Victor Hugo, who could, and may turn it inde-arcellent account. The author of this weep certy tale taken very good care to fix the habitat of this wonderful plans in a very deep valley in Madegascar, where he might with pood reason suppose no one would be likely to penetrate; but it so happens that we are not altogether ignorance of the lotony of that country—in fact, its history and vegetable products are pretty well known, and had any plant of more than ordinary interest existed there we should have beard of it from some reliable source, and not through such a suspicious channel as the New Yerk Werk, with the names of two Germans attached as a vanisher for its authenticity. It is very well known that there are movements in plants which are of a new-clike character, such as the Venus Fly Trap (Diomon musespeale), the effects of which close together when a gland on their inner surface is touched; the "Moving Plant" (Helpharacom grann), whose young leaves more spontaneously under strong unlight; the sensitive plant and others of its element of divisions, and in the element of the first work and not the work mavements as these are general and socially destroyed, and not you has to justify the description given of the powers of the Man-eating tree.

promised early, the Fates were against its being made; and if Mr. LLOYD has spent any time and trouble in its preparation his any time and trouble in its preparation his isbour has been thrown away, except so far as it may furnish him with material for criticising the statement that may be made by his rival. But the report of the Board of Audit serves to a small extent the purpose of such a statement. It is customary when a Treasurer goes out of office for a friend to set in conjunction with a friend of the incoming Treasurer in counting the such and overhauling the securities. This lies been done in the present case by Me duch and overhauling the accurities. This liss been done in the present case by Mr. Kichaen Jones, acting on behalf of Mr. Lioyn, and Mr. Grozer Thornton acting on behalf of Mr. Foreter. The result of their investigation is given in Thursday's Herald. With the exception of the amount of payments in London, not yet passed through the local books, they find the cash in hand equal to all the credits.

We have had many statements of this kind now, seeing that we have had so many changes in the Treasury department, but never before have we had a statement in which one Treasurer handed over to another so large a sum of surer handed over to another so large a sum of noney. Mr. FORSTER comes into possession of no less a sum than £1,×67,757, part of which of course is loan money, and has to be pent on public works, but the larger part of it to the credit of the Consolidated Revenue is to the credit of the Consolidated Revenue Fund. Very nearly £1,400,000 is in cash at the Bank of New South Wales in Sydney, nearly £50,000 is in cash in the Lendon branch of the same bank, and over £400,000 is is the Treasury chest in the form of interest-bearing securities. To the credit of the Consolidated Revenue there is only attual cash to the amount of £673,270, but then this amount is as low as this simply because it has been convenient to make advances towards some different loan funds, and these advances are to the amount of funds, and these advances are to the amount of £865.000. It was of course good financial policy not to borrow money as long as there was money lying in the bank at little or no interest, and it is a convenient inancial arrangement for one account which financial arrangement for one account which is in funds to lend pro tem, to another, but taking account for the advances thus made from the revenue side to the lean side, the real balance to the credit of the Consolidated Revenue Fund is £1,638,279, or consonated Revenue Fund is £1,38,279, or fully six months' gross revenue of the colony. To compare small things with great, the lightich revenue if in a similar flourishing condition would have the sum of thirty millions terling to its credit.

11 was in May, 1872, that the last friendly dedit of this kind. on a change of Ministry, ook place—Mr. RICHARD JONES being also on that occasion one of the auditors, and sociated with Mr. FARTH. It is worth while lenging back at the state of affairs then, just o infice the contrast between the state of our finances at that date, and their state now.

and to see what the interval of prosperity has done for us. At that time, when Mr. PIDDINGTON went in to take charge of the Treasury, the Consolidated Revenue had nothing at all to the credit, but was really overdrawn to the extent of £304,717, so that if we add the present credit to the then overdraft, there is a difference between our impecuniosity then and our wealth now of £1,842,987. When Mr. Loun went out of tifice, in May, 1872, he of course could have had no conception of the good luck that was to follow; nor when Mr. draft, there is a difference between our impecuniosity then and our wealth now of £1,842,987. When Mr. Lour went out of effice, in May, 1872, he of course could have had no conception of the good luck that was to follow; nor when Mr. Piddington went into office could he have had any foresight of it either, although, before his health commelled his health and health health and health health and heal had any foresight of it either, although, before his health compelled him to retire, signs of the turning of the tide had already been exhibited. There was, however, still remaining an everdraft on the Consolidated Revenue Fund when he was obliged to hand over the care of the Treasury to his colleague, Mr. LLOYD—a transfer which took place on the 6th December, 1872. Mr. LLOYD has had the good fortune to be Treasurer at a time when the funds of the colony were more abundant than at any previous period of our history. He has very properly always abstained from claiming to himself any portion of the credit of this prosperity, and has not assumed that it was a special mark of the favour of credit of this prosperity, and has not assumed that it was a special mark of the favour of Providence on the country which had the wisdom to elect so proper a financier. The credit, however, that he may fairly claim is to have handled the money wisely. We cannot as yet say what criticisms his successors have in store for him; but, so far as the facts are at present known, Mr. L.cvvn has administered the affairs of his department wisely and well, and the proposals that he made for turning his surplus to or sis department wisery and well, and the propossis that he made for turning his surplus to account appear to us to have been judicious.
His tenure of office will always be noteworthy in our history as that in which the advalorem duties were repealed. It was his good fortune to be able to relieve the pressure of taxation, and his Budget speeches were models of clearness and fulness. His successor now enters into possession of an unexampled sum of money, and we sincerely truet that it will he wirely and virtuously used. Constitutionally speaking, it is almost a dangerous power for the Government to possess to have such a sum of money at its disposal. It may of course be employed in an underhand way is corrupting constituencies, in bribing hon, members, by a promise of all sorts of good things for the people on whose favour their own position depends, and in doing this with an eye not so much to the general good of the country, as to keening themselves in comment. posals that he made for turning his surplus to much to the general good of the country, as to keeping themselves in power. We hope, how-ever, that the new Ministers will have more witue than to lend themselves to such a course. We had better be poor again than for our public wealth to be the means of corrupting our public men. Mr. Fonster, however, will well understand that the position being one unprecedented and abnormal, there is attached to it a special danger. The distribution of the money will be regarded with an unusual amount of jealousy, and this jealousy will be proper under the circumstances. It is only by a watchful oversight over all that the Government does, and over all its processes of making itself popular, that we virtue than to lend themselves to such a course is processes of making itself popular, that we in have any effectual guarantee against there will be a difference of about £100,000 if the Stamp Duties are not renewed, and a proportionate difference if they are only partially renewed. The time may come, perhaps, when we may feel the need of this money, but at the present mement it cannot be averred that there is any pressing necessity for the tax, and the reasons which urged its original imposition cannot be said to exist now. It is always harder to put on a new tax than to keep an old tax going, and though the Act has lapsed its official machinery is all in existence, and as a matter of prudence it may be wise to revive it. Mr. Forster can hardly be expected to make his finsacial statement directly Parliament breets, because, having been forced into the country to meet his constituents, he has been here will be a difference of about £100,000 in country to meet his constituents, he has been thable to devote himself to the study of figures. shade to devote himself to the study of figures, and will require some little time to get up the shole care. At the same time, unless there is simething new to be discovered, the real candition of our finances has been so fully disclosed in various documents, that we can hardly anticipate that anything will be put in a very new light.

WITH the exception of Mr. Forester, who has a long journey to make to meet his constituents, all the members of the new Ministry have now been re-elected, and it without opposition. In similar cases we have often had opposition to the re-election of Dinisters, but we cannot call to mind a single use in which it has been successful. Opposition tactics have been exerted to this way, but as a rule the mmon sense of the people has always foiled such tactice. There is therefore in past expe-vience very little encouragement, to any manurure of this kind, nor can we see that it standard of this kind, nor can we see that it is ever justifiable, unless there is something distinctly atrocious in the appointment for which the popular endorsement is thus sought. The total absence of opposition in the present use may either be accepted as an indication that the public is disposed increasingly to look upon the re-election of Ministers as a form, or clee that it acquieces in the change of Cabinet that has been brought about and is willing that has been brought about, and is willing that has been brought about, and is willing that the new men should be considered as entitled to a fair trial. At any rate, if the construction of the new Ministry had really shocked the public conscience, some signs of this public feeling would have shown themselves, and therefore we are bound to recognize that the contentment with which each constituency has returned its old member, and has condened his accentance of office, is cach constituency has returned its old member, and has condoned his acceptance of office, is an intimation that in these constituencies at least the opinion prevails that there was nothing improper in the decisive vote that they gave in Parliament, and nothing improper in their assuming the responsibility of office. To some extent, therefore, this decision of these constituencies supports the view the House took on Mr. Wearne's motion, and must be accepted as in effect a repudiation of that motion. If it is also to be accepted as an intimation in advance of the opinion of the full Parliament when it meets, we are entitled to timation in advance of the opinion of the full Parliament when it meets, we are estitled to infer that anything like a vote of want of con-fidence, presented simply on the ground of the personnel of the new Cabinet, would not be sup-The new Ministry comes into power in virtue

The new Ministry comes into power in virtue of no successful career of opposition, nor by reseon of any very visible unpopularity on the part of the late Ministry, but simply because the out-going men committed one mistake, a mistake whose penalty came so inexorably whind it that there was no separating the two-flevated thus into office simply by the accident of one transaction, the new men feel in necessary to reconcile the public to the thange, and, indeed to try and persuade them that it will prove an advantage rather followed the bas lead of the new Pranta. It is with some feeling of shame as to the tone of thought and feeling amongs by politicians that we have read lately so many which consists simply of detraction. Now while we have all along admitted the imprintey of the act for which the late Ministry were censured, and the propriety of the censure that fell upon them for it, we cannot so resilipforget that for nearly three years they seducted the affairs of the country with credit to themselves and to the satisfaction of the people. It is true that they have left much undone that they ought to have done, and that they might the meelves and to the satisfaction of the people. It is true that they have left much undease that they ought to have done, and that they might have done, and that in some matters they have bungled; etill no Ministry can be absolutely perfect, and on the whole their career was popular and deservedly popular. We see no justice nor generosity in forgetting that if it had not been for the one unfortunate blunder they would have been in power now, and they would have been so to the contentment of the great mass of the country, and to the disgust only of a comparatively small section. Let us judge on public men, we do not say with charity, hit with fairness, and, while blaming them for whit they have done wrong, give them credit for what they have done woney. The age of chiralry, it is true, has gone, but a little of the spin of chivalry might fitly survive; and if me have to dismuss a Ministry, which in spits of some errors has done good service, let thus retire from their post of nonour without or seeking to sully their fame as undeserved, we to cover them with unnecessary abuse. When Mr. Parress was in power, we had sery limit his position to pat him on the back when is lost his temper and abused the leader of the Opposition, and we have just as little disposition now that Mr. Roukrasor is necessary proposition, and we have just as little disposition in one that Mr. Roukrasor is necessary and the second of the opposition, and we have just as little disposition to pat him on the back when is lost his temper and abused the leader of the opposition, and we have just as little disposition now that Mr. Roukrasor is necessary and the leader of the opposition and the leader of the opposition of the Mr. Roukrasor is necessary and the leader of the opposition are the leader of the opposition and the leader of the opposition and the leader of the opposition ar lost his temper and abused the leader of the Opposition, and we have just as little disposition now that Mr. Robertson is in possit, to pat him on the back for abesian Mr. Pahkks. They have both readered the country service, and they may both readered it service still. They have both worked harmoniously together in times that are past, and for anything we know to the contrary, they may work in the same Cabinet again, and it ill tecomes either of them to rest his claim to public support on the levelling down of his gival. We have, too, a strong opinion that all this abuse is wasted, that the public is on the shole more just to them both than they are to set other, and that neither gains anything is seen at extimation by disparaging his opponent. The sew Ministers miscalculate the tone and temper of outside opinion when they think that they really recommend themselves to public fatour earlier to the most of their profession. two Governments. Its subsequent discussion by the Melbourne and some of the provincial journals, and the lucid articles in the Sydney Morning Herald on the subject (which have been partially reproduced here), are keeping the question fresh, and we may soon hope to be in a position to judge, from the interchange of letters between the two Governments, as to the probabilities of an agreement being arrived at. The great diversity between the two tariffs gives the advantage of the trade to the Sydney merchant, for there can be no doubt that, with free trade across the border, coupled with free trade in Sydney harbour, our merchants will be so heavily handicapped as to be easily undersold in their own markets. For this reason there is considerable lukewarmness in some quarters about opening the trade. The difficulties of an agreement in which perfect equity shall be secured towards both colonies have become more apparent since the recent discussions, and the Chamber of Commerce committee have recognised the necessity of a deeper insight into the question in its varied bearings by appointing a much stronger sub-committee to deal with it and to watch the course of events.

The anomalies and difficulties with which the question abounds ought to help us (when they are fully exposed) to a reform of our tariff in the direction of free trade, and we shall see whether the Ministry will have the courage to attempt it as the time approaches for Parliament to meet.

I observe by the Sydney telegrams that the policy announced by the new Pramier includes it as the time approaches for Parliament to meet.

I observe by the Sydney telegrams that the policy announced by the new Premier includes amongst other things an arrangement for more expeditions mail contracts. This is an item of more importance than ordinary readers are accustomed to attach to it, and perhaps Mr. Robertson will extend the contemplated reform to the Intercolonial pustal arrangements. The overland post between Melbourne and Sydney is becoming more extensively availed of; and as your Southern railway is extended towards our border so the route will become increasingly popular. An absurd anomaly is, however, at present tolerated. The mails from here to Sydney are lying in the Albury office some six or seven hours, and from Sydney to Melbourne the mail-bags have a quiet rest of twelve hours in this same place. This will scarcely be submitted to much longer.

ing doctors, this seems to be the only course left as on the question of the efficacy of intravenous injection of ammonia in cases of smake-onto. The last mail has brought us the report of the commission on anake-poisoning which has recently been sitting in Calcutta, and if the conclusions arrived at by the savans on that commission be sustainable, there are many people here who are supposed to have been anatched from the very jaws of death by Professor Halford's process of injection of ammonia who are under a gross delusion, and who must have been doubly saved in spite of this dangerous operation, for the Indian commissioners ascert that it "rather expedites than retards the tendency to death." The commissioners think "it is much to be regretted that some experimenters have so unwisely advocated, and in the strongest terms, a treatment which has not stood the test of an imparitial investigation," and they add—"It seems difficult to understand, granting their honesty of purpose and common sense, how they could have arrived at conclusions so diametrically opposed to facts." This is rather hard upon the medical profession of Victoria, who imagined themselves as good judges of facts as those of Calcutta. Professor Halford reviews very briefly in the Argus the assertions of the commission, and answers seems clauses of their report, while as to other parts of it he can only protest, he says, against such nonsense having been published. Hast year an unsuccessful application was made to the Government to obtain a vote of the Legislature for prosecuting further experiments in enake-poisoning; perhaps after this it will be renewed.

"Chesp law" would seem to be a contradiction in terms, as we ordinarily apply the term. "law,' but cheap justice is one of those things which in this reforming age we are ever hoping to realise. A good deal has certainly been done in this direction in late years, although much still remains to be accomplished. GENERAL SUMMARY.

THE continued prosperity of the pastoral in-terest—the main source of the general pros-perity of the colony—was seriously threatened a short time back; but the cause of alarm has a short time back; but the cause of slarm has now, we hope, passed away. The squatters have been enjoying not only the advantage of good prices for their produce, but a run of fine seasons that made it abundant. But no one in Australia supposes that fine seasons will succeed each other for ever.

Recollections Recollections of prolonged periods of drought, accompanied by heavy losses of stock through sheer want of grass and water, recur to the minds of the older residents; and at the beginning of the present year the long absence of rain, and other indications, seemed to the weather-wise to foretoken the recurrence of one of these disastrons. the recurrence of one of these disastrous visitations. Although of late considerable visitations. Although of late considerable sums have been expended upon works for the storage of water, improvements of this kind have not been made on a scale commensurate with the general expansion of pastoral enter-prise in the taking up and stocking of new country. The interior, if not generally overcountry. The interior, if not generally over-stocked, is not so largely understocked as it used to be; and now that there are so many more mouths to feed, a drought that would burn up the grass and cut off the water supply would be far more fatal than in the days when flocks and herds could travel freely over the country in search of grass and water. Happily we have had within the last fortnight genial showers extending far into the interior, and we have reason to hope that the drought has broken.

Two or three years ago people were beginning to think that the mining interest was about to overtake the pastoral, if not to exceed it in importance; and some of the most san guine amongst us were anticipating the time when the gold yield of New South Wales, which when the gold yield of New South Wales, which in the three years from 1870 to 1872 inclusive had doubled itself, should equal or surpass that of Victoria. Those anticipations have proved fallacious. The yield for 1873 showed a considerable decrease upon that for 1872, and the yield for 1874 a still larger decrease upon that for 1873. The returns for Victoria during the last nine years have shown somewhat less of discipation and have shown somewhat less of fluctuation, and have indicated rather a steady though gradual decline; but we are a very long way below the Victorian level. Last year's falling-off in Victoria amounted to about one-ninth of the previous year's product. In New South Wales the decrease amounted to about one-fourth; and late accounts from New Zealand show that the yield in that colony has diminished in about the same ratio. The Queensland returns are not before us; but it may be said that with a disclosion would be a Victoria with a disclosion with a victoria wit said that, with a slackening supply from Vic-toria, New Zealand, and New South Wales, there is less ground than ever for the appre-hension that the production of gold will exceed the demands of the world's expanding commerce.

Another question connected with our producing and commercial interests has turned up recently. The inconvenience of maintaining a system of Border Customs upon the line that divides this colony from Victoria is felt not enly in the Border districts, but amongst the merchants of Melbourne, whose hold upon the trade of our Southern territory is weakened by it; and the Melbourne Chamber of Commerce has been discussing the question with the Victorian Government. The result with the Victorian Government. The result has been a promise that negotiations shall be opened with the Government of this colony with the view of substituting for the actual collection of duties on the border some arrangement whereby each colony should obtain its legitimate revenue. But as the tariff of Victoria is framed on pretection principles, and ours on the principles of free trade, the problem is by no means easy of solution. If Victoria would take a lesson from us in political segments the difficulty would see reside.

Victoria would take a lesson from us in political economy, the difficulty would soon vanish; but that at present seems out of the question, when leading men in Victoria, who call themselves free-traders, are found ready to assume Ministerial functions with the avewed intention of carrying out a policy of protection. On the other hand, much as we desire to see the Border difficulty settled, we value free trade too highly to sacrifice it for that purpose by levelling up our tariff to the standard of Victoria.

Some late news from Fiji seems to show that the government of the new colony is being conducted efficiently under Mr. Layard, the Administrator, though not altogether to the satisfaction of the planters, who find coloured labour becoming a more costly luxury under the new regime. An attempt has been made to bring the heathen and cannibal tribes of the mountain districts into submission by peaceful means. The beginning promises well, and, should that promise be realised, one of the causes which in England have led to apprehensions of heavy outley will disappear. The appointment of an ex-Governor of the Maurittus as first Governor of Fiji has produced some surprise here because it seems to indicate on the part of the Home Government on over-estimate of the importance of the poot, and a mistaken belief in the necessity for a coetly establishment. The general indicate on the part of the Home Government an over-estimate of the importance of the post, and a mistaken belief in the necessity for a coetly establishment. The general post, and a mistaken belief in the accessity for a costly establishment. The general opinion here is that there are hundreds of officers in the Imperial service who could administer the affairs of the colony efficiently, and would be ready to accept a moderate salary. Of course we have no right to object if, as the Spectator says, the Home Government should think fit to give from the Imperial Treasury, £25,000 to the man entrusted with the first five years of founding work. But the situation is altered if we are asked to bear a half-share of the expenditure. In our judgment any specially heavy outlay is unnecessary; a colonial criticism which is only of importance when colonial resources are called upon to when colonial resources are called upon to bear a share of the burden.

In September last a deputation from the Syd-ey Chamber of Commerce brought under the notice of the Government various objectionable points in the Customs' law and its administra-tion, the tendency of which was to waste time, points in the customs are always in administration, the tendency of which was to waste time, to cause unnecessary expense, and generally to hamper the operations of commerce and the shipping interest. Mr. Lloyd, in reply, said that a bill to amend the Customs' law had already been prepared; and Mr.
Parkes, who was present, gave the deputation to understand that the administrative grievances complained of would be inquired into.
The Customs' Law Amendment Bill is one of those measures that have been thrust aside by the pressure of more exciting questions; and here, as in England, it must be conceded that "you cannot drive half-a-dozen considuaces through Temple Bar abreast of each effect." But how is it that the administrative part of the question has been neglected? The annual meethas been neglected? The annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held on Wednesday week; and in the report then adopted it was stated by the committee that "no steps have yet been taken by the Government, so far as they are awate, in removing the evils complained of."

If any steps had been taken, the committee of the Chambers of the Chamber of Commerce should of all men have been aware of it; and we must presume therefore that the matter has been presume therefore that the matter has been allowed to slumber. It is to be hoped that Mr. Forster will attend to it promptly. Few things can be more inconsistent than to adopt free trade as the policy of the colony, and then to allow the commerce of our chief seaport to be fettered by the restrictions of an antiquated and cumbrous system of Customs, and by delays and charges that have as bad an influence on trade as heavy duties, whilst in great part they are no source of gain to the public revenue.

The eighty-seventh anniversary of the colony

The eighty-seventh anniversary of the colony The eighty-seventh anniversary of the colony was celebrated on 26th January with the usual festivities. The day was fine, the wind was fair for the regata, and the people turned our in crowds. At night, after the majority of the holiday folk had returned to their homes, there was a beautiful fall of rein, to freshen up the country, and revive the hopes of the farmers. So many lay sermons have been preached upon the anniversary text that it is hard to say anything new about it. The Governor, however, in his speech on The Governor, however, in his speech on board the flag-ship, took the right line in com-paring the small things of 1788 not merely with the actual position of Sydney and New South Wales but with the results of the progress of the whole of Australasia. It is not the foundation of a single colony that we have been commemorating, but the day when the whole Australasian dominion was founded; and, as we remarked, the time will come when the younger colonies, instead of keeping up the remembrance of their separation from New South Wates, will look back upon and rejoice over the founding of New South Wates as the starting point of Australian history.

A satisfactory piece of evidence as to the prosperity of the colony was afforded at the annual meeting of the Henevolent Society. In the out-door relief branch of that institution, last year, the number of cases relieved (4024) was less by 734 than the number for the preceding year. This relief is afforded in cases of destitution where the application is recommended by a clergyman or a plication is recommended by a clergyman or a subscriber, after inquiry—cases, therefore, presumably of a deserving character. And the decrease in their number may well be traced accordingly to the greater demand for labour, accordingly to the greater demand for labour, and the increased facilities for obtaining employment that are now open to those who seek it. In connection with this subject it may be here remarked that Mr. Taylor, secretary to the Amalgamated Miners Association of Victoria, has stated that at least one thousand good able-bodied men in that colony would gladly avail themselves of any sifter of an engagement in New South Wales at, say, 7s. to 7s. 6d. per day, with a guarantee of one or two years' employment, and some assistance in meeting the cost of the journey. How can we regard this except as an illustration of the mischievous efforts of the pretective molice of the refer to the point of the protective molice of the protection molice of the mischies of the protection molice of the protection mol this except as an illustration of the mischievous efforts of the protective policy of Victoria? That colony has been in the way to receive the benefit of the same wave of prosperity in which we are now rejoicing.—the result mainly of the large demand and the high prices ruling for pastoral produce. Why is not the labouring man a participant in the profit there as well as here? The truth is that, in attempting to make Victoria an artisane paradise by means of protection, the healthy growth of commercial and industrial enterprise has been checked, the cost of living has been raised, and all except the protected classes suffer. Their turn also will come in time. In the meanwhile the forcing-house of the artisan is too hot for anybody else to breathe in freely, and an immigration scheme is ready to our hand, an immigration scheme is ready to our without having recourse to the old world.

The leader of the Opposition lost no time in reviving the question upon which the Government had appealed from the late Assembly to the people, namely, the propriety of their conduct in laying the minute of the Governor respecting the release of the prisoner Gardiner upon the table of the House. The question was put to the new Assembly as nearly as possible in the terms in which it was formerly submitted by Mr. Combes, namely:—"That the House regrets that your Excellency should have been advised to communicate to this Assembly his Excellency's minute to the Executive Council, dated the 23rd June last, with reference to the release of the prisoner Gardiner. Because it is indefensible in certain of its allegations, and because, if it is considered to be an answer to the respectful and earnest potitions of the people, it is highly undestrable to convert the records of this House into a means of conveying censure or reproof to our constituents; and it is refers to the discussions in this Chember, them it is an applicated of Parliment." This sybney morning Herald.

I amendment was proposed for insertion before the last paragraph but one of the address in reply to the Governor's speech; and at the close of the dobate the amendment was carried by 33 votes to 29. The principal speakers in the debate were Mr. Robertson and Mr. Parkes; but very little was said that had not previously been advanced. Mr. Parkes, however, alleged that the appeal to the constituencies was upon the general policy of the Governmen, which the amendment of the hon. member for West Sydney did not challenge.

In the Legislative Council, on the same day, Mr. Docker endeavoured to move an amendment for inserting after paragraph 2, an expression of regret that his Excellency should have been advised in the speech upon proroguing Parliament, on the 25th June, 1874, to address words containing censure upon the Legislative Council for the manner in which it had exercised the constitutional privilege of dealing with all measures submitted to it for consideration, as such censure was unprecedented, unconstitutional, a breach of the privileges of Parliament, calculated to impair the usefulness of the Council as an independent legislative body, and to disturb the harmony of its relations with the other branch of the Legislature. The President, however, ruled, on the authority of May, that the amendment could not be proposed, inasmuch as it had not been submitted before the question was put from the chair. On the afternoon of the following day (the 29th), the Government tendered their resignations to his Excellency felt that he was placed in a position of onexampled difficulty, and required a day to consider what course he should pursue. The address agreed to by the House declared that the Governor's minute was indetentioned to ensure his Excellency. On the motion for declaring the seat of the Hon. John Robertson vacant, an amendment was preposed in the Legislative Assembly on Tuesday to this effect. "In declaring such vacancy this House foels it to be its duty at once to declare its entire disapporoval of the Ministry as now formed." The proposition was met by indignant proteste from members on both sides of the House, and when the division was called for the mover appeared alone in its support.

The Colonial Secretary, the Minister of Lands, the Postmaster-General, the Minister of Mines, and the Minister of Public Works, have each been re-elected without opposition. The Colonial Treasurer is now before his contituents, the electors of the Murrumbidgee, and no doubt whatever is entertained of his re-election, and up to the present time there is no opposition to his return. The flowernment do not propose to do much more than pass the Estimates this session; indeed, the state of public business is such as to preclude ruch being attempted. MINING SUMMARY.

MINING SUMMARY.

From the date of our last mail summary, until a few days ago, the weather has been so dry, in all parts of the country, that mining operations have been very seriously retarded, and in many places actually suspended for the time being. Recently, however, there has been a beneficial change that has been felt, more or less, in almost every portion of the colony, and the miners have resumed work in the full confidence that the supply of water will not fail them now fer at least come weeks to come. The provisions of the new Mining Act are being gradually extended throughout the colony; several new wardens have been recently appointed, together with the necessary subordinate officers, so that the judicial provisions of the Act will now be fairly tested. Some of the regulations lately promulgated appear distasteful to many of the miners, and attempts will be made to induce the new Government to make certain alterations, which are thought necessary to facilitate the working of the Act.

Gold.

The returns of the past four weeks have been rather low, but the scarcity of water has caused a temporary suspension of puddling operations in many places; but there is a large quantity of wash-dirt on hand, which will doubtless be at once put through the machines, as there has been sufficient rain to fill nearly all the dams.

The latest news sent by our correspondent at Hill End is of a more cheering character than we have had for a leng time. He may that in the Frenchman's claim they are getting fair payable.

Hermannis tributers are reported to have come upon good stone. The Mar of Peace has sterked fresh stopes merth and south from the both sides, especially the north, which will, I should say, so four four. This stope reaches the 410-feet level, and the fact of the yield being thus good spenks volumes for the future of the Hill. The Tribute adds an additional no feet on the north. The ground so opened is thus worked—A stope 25 feet bigh is taken along north and seath from the shaft for half of the 75 feet; the openings thus made—the "gunnies"—are then tumbered and packed with mullock, and the men start afresh from the shaft on the lower 25 feet, where they can work without interfering with the shaft in any way, and the shaft in started again, to provide another 50 feet tope. On the north side this routie is varied by the men from Meyer's ground laking up the running on the upper stope as soon as they have brought their own ground to its level. Cock, Attwood, and Dwyer are raising good stoff, and there is some encouraging news from Kromann's.

Our Guigong and Home Rule correspondent reports that the escort returns from that part level for the shareholders. On other claims near the above a good deal of dirt is coming to grow. On the What-do-you-think-of-it, are carting about 180 leads to the pudding-machine, and if it yields anything like the first prospects it will not something handsome into the pockets of the shareholders. On other claims near the above a good deal of dirt is coming to grow. On a block off the Home fulle Lead. Keating and 181 hands and are diriving, and on servered claims toward law has been betoned un a prospect of it grain to the claim and the servere

A small quantity washed from the head of the Fairy Lead gave a ruturn of about 7 dws. to the lead. On Monday a duffer was bottomed on Kirby's Loundary, but they will get the gold by driving for it. Hogan's picked out about 14 oz., and fruce about 6 oz. during the week. No. 2 washed up for about 14 dws. to the lead. The block off No. 2 will bottom in a few days. Scully's are satisfied with their prospect, and will wash next week, and 1 hear Harrison washed up for about 1 oz. to the load. The Tichborne on the whole looks healthy, and although several iresh shafts are going down at the lower end, nothing rich has been got. Most of the claims down to No. 10 below Murray's may be considered more or less payable. But though No. 4 above Murray's consider they have a payable claim, it has not yet given them their back expenses for the eight months they have spent looking for it.

COPPER AND TIN.

Very little news of moment has reached us part of the colony for some time past, but matters appear to be progressing in the usual steady is shion. The rain that has recontly fallen in the North will allow of a larger amount of tin being washed than has been done for some time past, and an increase in the quantity of ore arriving in the past, with the past, and the past is the past of the past wn may, therefore, be shortly expected.

THE WEATHER AND CROPS—PASTORAL.

Since the last mail left our shores a most welcome downpour of rain has terminated the long drought from which the colony was suffering; and it is most satisfactory to report that all parts of the interior, westward beyond Orange, northward to Quoensland, and southward to Victicia—the count of this most gunial rainfall. In some places thunder showers preceded the steady rain which set in it Sydney on the 4th instant. Already the effects of the much needed supply of moisture are seen in the changed solour of the country, which is everywhere putting on its most vendent appearance. The warmth of the sum will bring up the greas very rapidly now that the ground is scaked, and if we get the usual reletation of thunder-showers to keep it fresh and succulent, loatile and sheep ought to be well fed during the autumn season.

The rainfall came too late for some of the early mains, and farmers will suffer loss by the drought; but as the built of this grain is produced in the rich low-lying lands, that retain moisture in almost the driess assoon, three will doubtless be a fair harvest. All the later maize will be greatly benefited by the rain; and the languishing incerne crope all come on rapidly to perfection. The drought troved very prejudicial to the potate crop in many place beyond the Dividing Range, and if was almost a hailure. The rain now fallen, however, has prepared the ground for the planting of the winter crop of potatoes in the weeting have greatly advanced in prios from the same the workers parts of the colony, and if the season continues invorsable there ought to be no lack of the inhers. wool having realized 30d, per lb. in London.

In placing this property in the market the Auctionsers feel that the harrow limits of an advertisement will not admit of a sufficiently sulogistic description of these stations, and invite intending purchassers to imaped them, when their own discrimination would at once place these runs in their highest estimation; and while the runs could not be surpassed, their position could hardly be, as they are situated within a few miles of the rising town of INVEREALL, which is fast becoming the centre from which the great tin mining population located on the eastern and northern sides of New England flow their supplies. Beyond this, the shready-surveyed line of the ORKAT NORTHERN RAILWAY TO QUEENSLAND will pass close by the station, thus placing it within easy communication with the METROPOLIS and SHIPPING PORT.

THE KIPORT MARKETS.—Private advices from England, foreshadowing the anticipations

THE KEPORT MARKETS.—Private advices from England, foreshadowing the anticipations of lower rates at the February wool sales, have increased the anxiety about how prices will open on the 25th. Those who bought here at high prices at the opening of the sasson are not anxious to operate at present; while others, availing themselves of low freights, are paying full rates for any good parcels of wool offering. The public sales this week have been fairly active, though the bulk of the lots offered were ends of clips and inferior. The principal parcels sold during the past four weeks have been:
